Three Generations.

The starless night its sombre veil has drawn, While softly falls the welcome rain, Upon the dusty street and sun-browned lawn, On mountain, hill and thirsty plain.

The tolling day has gone the way of days, And rest has settled like a dove Upon the household and its busy ways Resolving them to peace and love.

Within the lighted room a kindred four Are gathered round a humble hearth, In happiness, whose hand secures the door Against the darkness o'er the earth.

Unselfish love shines in a mother's eye, A father's face with fondness glows, A child sleeps with a crooning lullaby, A head is crowned with age's snows.

Three generations gathered here to-night,
And though their years are far apart, How closely twined they are in loving might,
As one in purpose and in heart!

To two, life's burden is but now full known,
To one its ward is just begun; While moves the fourth, to where he soon, Must answer as to duty done.

What man may boast that he hath heeded not Some call of him whose just demands Are voiced from day to day, nor wrong hath wrought.

Nor evil clasped with ready hands?
Not I, for one! And knowing this my prayer Goes up for him whose guiltless mind Is fallow to the world, and offers fair For growth of good or evil kind!

E. D. A.

On the Floridian Coast.

RUSH VILLA, CLEARWATER HAR-BOR, FLA., April 9, 1907.

Ed, Register:—The place from which this letter is written is not as well known as are many of the other resorts of which Florida boasts, because there are no great hotels here. Yet the bluffs here are not equalled by those on any other part of Florida's east coast line. Every foot of them is in the possession of rich people from various parts of the United States.
All of these land-holders have erected fine houses on their property, and nearly all of them have private piers adorned with artistic pavilions or bath houses, so that the view from the bay is indeed imposing.

Many of the great winter resorts here seem to have been established with but little regard to their environment, on the theory, I suppose, that the deficiencies of nature can be obscured by the arts of man. The world-famed Tampa Bay Hotel, for example, is surrounded by ground marvelously rich with semi-tropical vegetation, but when one goes to the borders of the property all the glory disappears and he wonders how such a site could have been selected.

In fact, Flagler and Plant with all the millions they have spent, and all the geniuses they have displayed, can not reward their patrons with such scenery as is enjoyed by men of more moderate means who have had the good judgment to invest in the limited elevated tract of land that borders this harbor. To sit on this porch and look through a tangle of vegetation—palms, magnolias, bay trees, liveoaks festooned with Spanish moss, and hanging vines —down on the many colored waters of the bay and thence across the harbor to the narrow palm-decked island which, like a long green wall, serves as a barrier to the billows of the great gulf, visible beyond it, is to behold one of the loveliest panoramas that nature spreads before the human eye.

Not much of Florida is so wonderfully endowed with beauty, however, and but a few hundred yards back from this bay the scenery is not such as to arouse enthusiasm. The absence of grass, the white soil, the palmetto shrub, and the pine trees mutilated by the turpentine gatherers, result in a wearisome spectacle. But the monotony of this flat woods district is broken at irregular intervals by flourishing groves of orange, lemon and grape-fruit tree. So in the midst of this apparent sterility a great prosperity abounds, and fortunes are being made where it seems that nothing save poverty could flourish.

We have found the temperature ideal and, as the skies have been cloudless, every day so far has been devoted to outdoor pleasures.
The trip down here was rich with interest, although, much against our wishes, all of the traveling, with the exception of crossing Hillsboro and Old Tampa Bays, was done in the dark. The first day was spent in Memphis. There we visited friends for a time and then took in the various points of interest that the town possesses.
The second day was given to Chattanooga. For this of course we had planned, and what we saw there cannot be adequately described to any one who has not visited the place himself. The morning was spent on Lookout Mountain. The altitude of this mountain above the surrounding territory is just twice that of Pilot Knob, and the view, although the same in nature as that afforded from the summit of the Knob, is proportionately more extensive.

The Tennessee river with its wonderful twists—one might call them contortions—is a much more imposing sight than are the silvery creeks that are seen threading their courses through Arcadia Valley. It was our fortune to hear, delivered from a point of vantage, a fine lecture on the battle of Lookout Mountain by a local Methodist minister, who was escorting a party of friends over the mountain.
The afternoon was spent at Chicamauga. We expect to visit the National Cemetery on the return trip. The third day was wasted at Jacksonville. Wasted, not because Jacksonville lacks points of interest, but because we were kept close to the depot by the false reports made concerning the time for the departure of the Tampa train. Jacksonville and St. Augustine are to be visited on the return trip.

It is strange how one will run across people whom, or of whom, he knows. One of the men we met on Lookout was the famous Methodist minister and lecturer, Dr. Quayle of Chicago, whom we had both heard lecture. Our companions on the trip to Chicamauga were a gentleman and his daughter from Crawfordsville, Ind. He was an intimate friend of the late Lew Wallace, and I also discovered him to be the uncle of one of my university friends.

Shortly after reaching Clearwater we drove out to visit one of the great orange groves, and there I met a Brooklyn woman with whom I had become well acquainted in Europe six years ago. The last I had seen of her was in Dresden, where she was making a frantic, and apparently fruitless, search for a trunk that belonged to an aged relative. The said relative had packed nearly all her money in that trunk before she had entrusted it to the railroad, and the trunk, of course, had gone astray. It was pleasing to learn after all these years of suspense that the old lady eventually recovered her property. I presume she now keeps a closer watch over her coin—that is if she has any left, which is more than we can expect for ourselves after we have bought our way back to Ironton.

"The Old World and Its Ways."

This is the title of a new and profusely illustrated book by Col.
William Jennings Bryan, recounting his noted journey around the earth and through Europe, which was so widely heralded through the American press.

The book is an illustrated and descriptive record of that entire journey, which is so memorable in current history. The journey embraced a period of a year, and covered practically all the nations of the earth.

Col. Bryan traveled with camera and pencil, and not only described, in brilliant phrase, what he saw, but further illustrated his journey by photographs. These photographs constitute a striking pictorial presentation and lend especial interest to the book. They number 240, and they show in picture the world as he saw it.
They constitute just that many striking Object-Lessons of the people of all countries in their cities, towns and villages—in their homes and everyday occupations.
The book will interest every reader as a unique presentation of a wonderfully interesting journey.
It is sold only through solicitors.
The Thompson Publishing Company of St. Louis, Mo., are the fortunate publishers. They advertise for agents in another column of this issue.
